Fall fly fishing recommendations for Pine Creek

Guys,

I'm trying to plan a trip late this summer or into the Fall to the Pine Creek area. I have some flexibility on dates and wonder if someone can give me a recommendation on the best timing and patterns I should focus on. Late September? October? I don't have much experience fishing in the late season, but I've heard it can be good on Pine, particularly for big Browns that time of year. I've fished Pine in May, but have not had much luck compared to the central PA streams that time of the year. Still trying to zero in on specific stretches of water and patterns. I would think terrestrials would be the best bet for the surface late summer and into at least the early Fall, but not sure how long into September or October those patterns would work. Really don't have a clue what sort of nymphs to fish that time of the year.

Appreciate any advice or experience you might be able to offer.
