I went to Cabela's Saturday night and picked up a Three Forks outfit. I fished the Little Lehigh this morning for a bit, and I might be crazy, but I think I like it more than the Imperial. I like at least as much. And it will be much easier to deal with when I break it.

I don't feel like making another thread right now, but while I'm mentioning the LL, what is the general rule about how close you should be? The last 2 times I've been there people have come right up to where I was. One guy was literally like 10 feet away upstream, casting almost exactly where I just was.

This morning some guy told me I could fish right next to him if i wanted to cast to a fish near him he was casting to. I guess I'm more used to only seeing one or two other people. I don't want to move to another spot. I don't really want to have to ask someone else to move, but I think people on the LL really get too close. There are enough fish that 6 people don't need to be fishing the same pool. Am I wrong?
