Things you want to be careful about when buy "their" brand.....

Read their return policy very carefully.

EVERY rod of theirs I bought ended up snapping except one and I got my first one from them in 1986

If they phased out thmodel you broke, exect to get 50% of current value. Example: buy a 2 forks rod for $99, they discontinue it and it goes in bargain cave for $39....you go to return yours but they no longer have one to replace it....they give you 50% of $39.

Due to that policy and every rod (5 of them) breaking, I'll never buy another model of theirs. Their rods broke while stringing up, casting or playing fish. In 30 years, the only sage, st croix or redington I broke was in a car door. Last week my nephew plowed his pontoon onto my z-axis that was hanging out the rear of my boat. No clue how it didn't snap but I'm confident if it was a cabelas brand, it would have broken 10 times over. It's too bad too because their FT+ and IM6 were great casting rods. Never had one make it an entire season and I don't fish often.

Also, after you have 3 break, they check the computer and don't expect andecision to go in your favor. ec
