The chance I hit the tip with a fly is 100%. Multiple times. This is most likely exactly what happened, because like I said before I barely put any pressure on the rod at all when it snapped. It also snapped completely into 2 pieces. The one I shut in the car door didn't even do that.

Kray I hope I have better luck with them than you have, but as rough on gear as I am I doubt I will. I paid the extra $9.99 for the 2 year service plan or whatever. Guy said it covered everything except being lost or stolen. So hopefully it doesn't cost me more than a trip back there, which isn't too far out of my way.

I guess the point is I need to be more careful. Which kinda sucks, because I like to leap before looking.
