

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : More work along the Loyalhanna

Re: More work along the Loyalhanna

Author: : Chaz

Date: : 2013/8/13 21:45:35

URL:

Since when is a channel split a bad thing, most streams in natural settings have them and it doesn't reduce trout populations. And where are the trees, you can't restore a stream without them. The structures may not prevent erosion, in fact it can, when it's hardscapped, cause more erosion. Even trees don't prevent erosion, but that section pictured clearly needs trees.