You might be able to get rio branded line and sell it for 20 dollars cheaper, but i would still buy the rio. The taper might be the same between the two but the technology will be in the rio. Like someone said earlier, the rio is probably second hand or line with less technology than the real rio branded stuff. Rio mainstream and rio avid have the same tapers, with that being said, there is a big difference between the two.....for example agent X and many other added technologies that go into the lines.

To the original poster, rio avid is a great fly line if you dont care to spend 75 or so for higher end stuff.
