

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Warmwater and saltwater rod choice

Re: Warmwater and saltwater rod choice

Author: : ebroesicke

Date: : 2013/8/15 17:32:13

URL:

Don't need a designated salt rod, just make sure you rinse it ASAP after every use. The main limiting factor in what you want to do will be fly size. Plenty of big fish are caught on lower wt rods, but throwing a 14" full size bunker fly into a headwind will be tough. TFO is a pretty decent rod, don't own one but they are pretty OK as far as I can tell. Some of the lower end ST Croix rods are nice (avid or imperial). My 10wt is an avid and I like it. It is a worthwhile endeavor to try them out first though cause for long(er) casts, a rod that fits your style will be helpful. Good luck.