

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Warmwater and saltwater rod choice

Re: Warmwater and saltwater rod choice

Author: : PhilC

Date: : 2013/8/16 9:33:03

URL:

Thats quite a stretch for just one rod...an 8 wt would probably cover most of it.

For salt though I lean towards a 10 wt. Wind is much more of a factor here than any other of your applications. That said, I feel like most people put more effort into matching the rod to the fish than I do. When I go to Florida (not this year due to Lake O coffee dumpage) I use my Dad's 10 wt avid...at night I take it around the lake/canals and catch bass with it, not an issue for me...even the lil bass will put a bend in it