A survey today discovered a wild BT population in a trib to the Delaware in upper Bucks Co. Preliminary data analysis indicated that the stream just missed the biomass by one kg that would have been required for a class A designation. A quick exploratory survey in 1992 did not reveal any trout being present. Quite a turn-around and very unusual for a stream without a history of pollution problems. Ultimately, the stream will be added to the wild trout streams list at some point.

Next week...a survey of another newly developed wild BT population in a new Berks Co Limestoner. This was a formerly warm stretch of stream with no trout in the 1990's that is now a cold Limestoner.
