if I happen to catch a very large fish I might want to keep it with the intention of eating it, can I? I understand that there is a limit to how many fish I can keep per day, but is there a restriction to only being able to keep fish from a certain area,

Welcome, Nocc, to our online community.

Your question is actually pretty complicated. Yes, you can keep fish to eat but it will depend on the size and species of fish as well as the time of year and the lake or stream in which you caught it. For us to be able to give you a solid answer, you would have to be more specific about where you are fishing and what species of fish you will be targeting. As someone who is new to fishing, I'd suggest taking a couple fishing trips with someone who is experienced (or hire a fishing guide) and they can introduce you to the different species and identify what you catch, whether they're good to eat, and whether it is legal to keep them.
