fade, my De buddy fished it (White Clay) a few times after my last report and caught trout every time. I don't think he's been there for a least a few weeks though. On the plus side, there were plenty of trout, but that was before our August weather in July... Considering how much rain we've been getting and the fact that we're now getting late Sept. weather, conditions are pretty favorable for some hold overs IMO. I'd give it a try on a cool AM if I wasn't so busy. (playing a gig at Fells Point MD tomorrow). I saw a couple nice smallmouths and my friend caught a nice one too. There are always a nice assortment of colorful sunfish to go with.
