Ideally, I would love to cast all of these options, but given that there's an extremely limited number of "fly shops" (read: big box stores like Bass Pro Shops), short of driving several hours to maybe find what I'm after, I'm going to have to survey the audience and take a crack at it. Worst case, I can sell the rod if I outright hate it.

The truth of it is, I will probably be using this rod a good bit more than it will be used as a loaner for my friend or even my wife, so I have to like the thing. Alternatively, as long as my wife can tolerate it, she probably won't care too much how it functions, as long as she catches something on it.
