

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Need help with a downstream approach

Re: Need help with a downstream approach

Author: : PennypackFlyer

Date: : 2013/8/19 16:28:56

URL:

The downstream approach is tricky. If you can get the presentation flowing right you can feed more line until your bait gets in their area. The tricky part is also once you have gone through the process you will have to wait/or should wait a certain amount of time. I would say around 10-15 minutes before you try again. Cast after cast will let the fish know that you or someone is there, and they will be more hesitant to strike.

Make sure you are wearing clothing that matches the surroundings as best as possible.