I don't really ever fish San Juan worms but they are just chenille tied to a hook and melted a little at the ends to get that taper and im sure there is a million variations. WB's I've been tying are on 2x or 3x size 10 streamer hooks. I use a cone head or a bead plus some lead wraps for weight. I usually stick to black, brown and olive and recently I've tied a few with peacock herl for body. Some I add crystal flash some I don't. I use mostly cheap strung saddle feathers for hackle. There is a million variations for any pattern it depends on the water(how deep, current, etc.) and personal preference.
