great photo essay - what a pretty stream, back in ye olden days, such rivulets would have had a full time riverkeeper to cut back the trees, scythe the weeds in early spring to create slots to fish and help nature out a little, and maintain the bridges.

they'd also use a wooden shovel shaped like a bricklayers hod to dig out the worst of the silt - though course now we'd just put in some wooden deflectors.

i'd guess that with a little TLC that stream could hold a lot of small trout or a few real nice ones.

a great long term project for someone with time on their hands...me, if I lived nearby and could get permission.
