Swattie: I think you're in the right place. I'm guessing the holsteins had trampled the banks to smithereens, increasing the channel width. The lowest device seemed to span the entire channel, so it may have been intended for grade control to protect the upstream structures from head cut. Just a guess.

I had not noticed the "No fishing on Sundays" sign, but it was a Saturday, so I could have safely ignored it nonetheless. I have never fished Havice up in the BSF, but hope to someday. Is it as crowded by Rhodies as Treaster?
