

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Grand cayman...anybody been?

Re: Grand cayman...anybody been?

Author: : geebee

Date: : 2013/8/23 1:42:37

URL:

Fish idiot,

The tide range is about a foot. Highest point on the island is 13ft above sea level.

That flat is south sound near savannah. Some big bones there by the re planted mangrove trees pots. Did you see the shoe tree ? Lol.

Better numbers are at rum point which is a white sand flat - the south side was mostly eel grass and gets soft if you wade more than 60 ft out.

The park on the west end also has a sand flat but I never made it there - got lost on the park roads twice.

PJ at Cayman orvis is yer man. I found the fishing very tough for bones, easy for baby tarpon and reef or pelagics.

The Thai in GT is awesome, as is the buffets at the big grocery stores on West bay road / smb - Kirks and Fosters. Jerk pork, goat curry and spicy mac n cheese. Yum Yum .

If you get the chance you're only 45 mins from little cayman or 90 minutes from Cuba for world class bone fishing . or strangely Panama which you dont think of as a bone fishing destination but there's a new lodge there.

Mark