Well the stream would be known to hunters but it is a real pain to get to, even impenetrable at points. There were no signs it had been visited by anyone. We have made a point this summer of hitting as many of those blue lines on the topo as the Endless Mountains as we can. The lesson of this one was it was only on the natural reproduction list (which is a lifetime sized list), on public lands, and was just difficult to get to. We're going back to fish the lower stretch which is even more of a hike in, and then there's that other stream. . . .

There are thousands of streams in the Endless Mountains like that. Have fun!
