Nice photos, I have much more luck dead drifting good sized buggers in the Susquehanna, stripping seems to be hit & miss, mostly miss. Sometimes you can get lucky and find them in the topwater mood for hoppers and poppers, love that action. You are lucky to still have the white flies around, we had a virtual circus with them 3 weeks ago on the Susky, no big fish rising til after dark though.

Have you ever fished for them in the evening, even on the slowest days the bite seems to pick up toward sunset, stripping poppers hard during that time can bring out some awesome topwater smashes.
