Your rod snapped in half just casting it? I kind of want to know more about the rod.

Anyway, I know you can get a rod/reel combo at Cabela's for under $100. I've never owned or cast a "premium" rod, but the three Cabela's rods I own cast pretty well in my mind. I have one wind river rod/reel combo. The rods not too bad, but the reel isn't as nice as the other reels I have.

I also have two Cabela's three Forks rods that I really like. I think they came with prestige reels.

I also have to say that the fly lines that came with the rod/reel combo were surprisingly fly good quality. Whatever they are, I like them better than the scientific anglers lines I had previously.
