

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : New 10 ft 7 for Erie Steel

Re: New 10 ft 7 for Erie Steel

Author: : boychick

Date: : 2013/8/31 9:02:18

URL:

If you have two 10' 7 wt. rods, I suggest getting a switch rod and line with a skagit head for swinging big streamers. An indicator rod just needs length for line control, you may not love the rods you have but they'll do the job. Why get a third indi rod when you've got that base covered? Go for the switch rod and swing for the fences! Check out the Redington switch rods, good prices and great warranty. I have the prospector 7113-4 and I love it. Redington just came out with a new series of switch rods called the dually which cost less than the prospector line and are worth looking at. Rig the 10' 7 wt for indicator fishing and rig the switch rod for swinging, which covers the steelhead game top to bottom.