I have a plastic snuff container with small holes drilled all around the outside through the bottom and through the top. When a fly comes off my line, it goes in the box. If they are still wet at the end of the day, I place them under the heater of the car for the ride home in winter and will sometimes hold them out the window and let the airflow dry them on warmer days. When I get home, I let them finish drying if needed before returning to the boxes.
