I have a 3 tray model, but they are the ones that are a little wider than they are tall. i.e. per tray there's more surface area than the square ones, I think. Green finish. I bought them with "strip foam" throughout, but tore that out, and replaced with C&F slit foam throughout (varied sizes). The outside tray lid has a leader wallet on it, leaving 5 surfaces covered with the C&F. It's got a Gink floatant holder too.

I hang nippers on a zinger on the strap. Just clamp hemo's to the strap above the box. I stick shot, tippet, and keys in a pocket, usually the waders chest pocket. But it does leave me having to be real careful about what waders I buy. i.e. I NEED a chest pocket, but it has sit low enough that the Richardson doesn't rest on it's contents.

If I had to do it over. Well, I guess I'd consider a 4 tray model, with some system to keep the shot, tippet, and leader wallet in one tray.
