Max, you mentioned using a 2wt. If i were you i'd reserve the 2wt for tiny brookie water. You might already know this but slate and cedar are decent sized streams and have some large wild brown trout, so you might want to use something with a little more backbone. The big browns are nobody's fool, they're healthy, and powerful. When hooked they often run right for, and usually live in/around, brush/cover so having something that can pull them away from it is helpful. Good luck and have fun. Slate and cedar are very beautiful streams. In my opinion the epitome of PA wild trout fishing.
