
Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : Raystown

Re: Raystown

Author: : Fishidiot

Date: : 2013/9/4 16:34:46

URL:

I'm not sure what water levels are like these days but oftentimes this time of year they are down a couple feet and you can walk the shoreline. If not, you'll have to look for a cleared area to fish (there are many) or hit it with a boat. Being a cold, deep, clear lake your best bet, I would think, would be to hit the water at dawn and evening. Mid day fishing under a bright sun will likely be tough. Search with a popper and if this doesn't work or the sun is still on the water I'd fish a big streamer like a WB or bunny leech under a big strike indicator around the edges of the weed beds for bass. If bass don't cooperate, set up a couple nymphs instead and go for panfish. In the evening it is possible you might see some stripers working the surface, particularly down by the dam, but I wouldn't hold my breath for stripers.....I'd chase bass and sunnies in the shallow weeds if I was fly fishing.