I didn't get a water temp. and I was fishing right at the mouth of a very cold spring creek ( I would say the creek is in the low 60's at the highest) but I saw rises upstream from there. It's definetly still a little early and that's why I went down there just to check it out but the trout were there. It's been pretty cold up here at night. You are right about wading though rabbit that river in the gorge is pretty treacherous at a lot of spots. If you stay tight to the bank and go around the pillar upstream it's doable depending on the water level but below the pillar I usually just stay on the rocks there and there is plenty of room to cast there. And thanks for fixing the title fishidiot, I will include county next time.
