

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : A tale of two streams...

Re: A tale of two streams...

Author: : rrt

Date: : 2013/9/8 17:18:39

URL:

Were they stocked? Did the streams rely on wild trout only? Were the water temps comparable? Do trout migrate to colder water on either creek? Is poaching a problem?

I am a believer in c/r regulations. I believe that some streams I know of are much better now than they were when I started fishing because almost all guys who fish them release the fish they catch, even without official c/r regulations.

One suffered from overharvest during the year of the locust (what most people like to call by the e----- name cicada), and only this year has it fished as it did before the slaughter during the locust year (3 or 4 years ago). This year there is a nice population of various ages of trout. For a couple years, all you could catch were mostly the little guys the locust guys didn't kill.

Anyhow, there are lots of questions about the two cricks you wrote about.