Looks like everyone is itching to get back on the Lehigh, I just got home from fishing below the Po, and yesterday we hit the gorge.

Still getting more bass than trout, but the water is looking good.

The bug life is definately on the upswing below the gorge, I haven't fished at Riverwalk for maybe three years and the biomass has made a great rebound even in that short time. Got one nice brown on a sulphur dry and a nice bass on a stone nymph. My usual stone flipping was a real eye opener and yes the iso's nymphs are lighter than other pocono streams. The gorge on Sunday was all subsurface, plenty of stonefly shucks but not much else to speak of and more bass than trout It should be a fun fall
