Thanks, guys. Message received and applied. My present boots are Simms Guide Boots with the StreamTread/Vibram outsole. Here in the desert, they dry extremely quickly since they have no felt, but I also did due dilligence to scrub them down with a hard-bristle plastic brush to remove the caked-on mud that could hold microcritters. I set them out to dry as suggested, but minus the bleach since there really is nothing to leech into on these. In the future, I do want to get a set of cheap felt boots as spares, so I have definitely noted using bleach in the future.
