These stocking-foot chest waders appear to be unused- no sign that they've ever been in the water. I found them in a thrift store, and couldn't resist buying them, even though they weren't exactly my size. I managed to squeeze my size 9 1/2 feet into them without causing any damage, and the legs seemed to fit okay, as long as I didn't do anything like squat down or step too high. So I bought them. How many times do you find like-new waders in a thrift store?

Upon checking in with Reality, I had to admit to myself that I would never, ever be able to actually use these, even as an emergency spare pair. So I'm putting them up for sale on the board.

$70, shipped. Half the price of a new pair
