I have always instructed new anglers to never throw a trout on the bank for photos, and to try to release them in the water as quick as possible. Also, just recently I have witnessed 2 anglers fight a fish for so long that by the time it got to the net it was belly up, and they were scratching there head wondering what happend. The funny thing is that they were using 5x tippet trying to land a 10inch fish. Know your tackles strength and get them in quickly and released even quicker. If a photo is necessary, try to have someone with you so it can be done in less than 30 seconds IN the stream. Most wild trout streams in pa are struggling whether you want to believe it or not, and they require utmost delicacy. Just my thoughts
