Depends whether you put on Creek or River at the end.

Pennypack Creek is ok. So is The Pennypack. But The Pennypack Creek is a little much. Almost redundant, because in context, "the" refers to a body of water, as does "creek".

Beyond that, I think whether the name could mean something else has a lot to do with whether it's ok to use "the ____." For instance, if I say I'm goin to the Letort, pretty much everyone would understand exactly what I mean. But if I say I'm goin to the valley, well...
