

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : 2013 Susquehanna SMB YOY report

Re: 2013 Susquehanna SMB YOY report

Author: : Fishidiot

Date: : 2013/9/14 8:20:55

URL:

Quote:

Fishidiot wrote:

My guess would be that the Delaware watershed and other mid sized river systems in the eastern half of the state will probably show similar results.

The folks at Maryland DNR have completed their YOY surveys of the Potomac River and it's major MD tributaries recently as well: results here were also below average. Not especially bad, some areas had a good spawn, but overall, the Potomac produced a slightly below average YOY in 2013. It's worth re-iterating that one will see these year classes, good or bad, for many years down the road. The Potomac YOY class in 2007 was very good (I think the highest on record?) and these fish are now in the 12-14" range making for some good fishing.