You think that's bad- I was planning to fish Boulder Creek, CO in a few days...

I fished a Central PA brookie stream right after a cloudburst on Friday. The water stayed clear. But it was very, very tight quarters. I was unprepared- did not have the right leader at all. Only got one fish. Still magical, though- while gazing at an apparently fishless little pool that was less than knee-deep, a nice fish rose about eight feet in front of me. From invisible to invisible. I could not figure out where it came from, or where it went. And then another one rose about six feet to the side of me.

I stared and stared. Nothing but low, clear water flowing over some pebbles and rocks.
