
Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : 2013 Susquehanna SMB YOY report

Re: 2013 Susquehanna SMB YOY report

Author: : Fishidiot

Date: : 2013/9/14 13:42:43

URL:

Quote:

wgmiller wrote:

Quote:

krayfish wrote:

I remember 100+ fish days in the early 80's. It still beats mowing the yard.

I've heard that from many people who fished the river during that time frame. Sad.

I too fished the river extensively in the 80s and 90s and - trust me - 100 fish days were never the norm. Did they occur? Sure. Two guys in a boat or a day of wading could certainly do this - even one guy could, with a clicker, count a 100 fish day. Nevertheless this was very rare (Looking back at my own fishing records from that era, I never came close to a 100 fish day).

To be fair to Krayfish.....he isn't implying that 100 fish days were routine. However I've long argued that "100 fish day" stories should always be regarded with skepticism and beginners who read this forum and lack perspective on PA FFing should bear this in mind. I had many - many - days fishing with fly and spin gear during the Susky glory years where I caught the skunk. It was mighty good back then.....but not that good IMHO.