That sounds eerily familiar dc. NickR and I were fishing the section upstream of the lowhead on Beechdale Road and had a very similar experience. I wrapped the electric fence with a fly and was able to safely untangle it. Unfortunately, I accidentally laid my rod against the wire and received a nice "How do you do" from it. The cows were also out in the field and being curious. Personally speaking, I feel a bit threatened by cows when they come up on me while fishing. I realize that I probably don't have anything to worry about, but they are significantly larger than me and in greater numbers. Their curiosity can be a bit disconcerting at times.

Hooking a heifer in the ear with a fly... That would be a first! But wrapping a fly around and electric fence...you're not a Lancaster County fly fisherman unless you've done that at least once!
