

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Snake boots

Re: Snake boots

Author: : L_soult

Date: : 2013/9/15 12:20:15

URL:

Quote:

Twofly wrote:

I know rattler bites are pretty rare in PA, but after a close encounter with a large timber, they are always in the front of my mind when brookie fishing miles from the car. I always pay close attention to where I step but most times theirs no other way to approach a hole without slogging though heavy thick grass or ferns where you cant see the ground. I feel I have been tempting faith for a while. Do any of you hard core brookie fisherman wear snake boots or snake chaps? Or are you confident hip waders are sufficient protection. If so ,what brands are most comfortable.

I hear ya. Ive been going in shorts and Texas all summer. I get myself worked up about snakes sometimes in the ground cover as you described. Most of the time I dont even think about them.