On the topic of leaving a fly in the ear of a cow. Not that the farmer would likely see his heifer with a size 6 crayfish earring but if it would have happened and he did happen to notice it would have definitely been a very bad PR move on my part. That thought helped me make the decision to throw in towel for the morning.

Another cow story: while backpacking out an archery killed buck in West Virginia after an extremely long track job, two buddies and myself found ourselves crossing a high country meadow in a fairly dense fog. We were suddenly surrounded by a herd of huge, semi-wild free ranging beef critters. I remember our concern about the possibility of a bull in the herd. I also remember saying that I felt fairly safe because I knew I could run faster than my one buddy. 🤔 What are friends for? Lol.
