Geebee, with "the lost misters" statement, I believe you are confusing heifers (young female) and steers (castrated male).

sorry, for the confusion - a language thing. In Europe we call the castrated males for fattening Heifers rather than steers :

<http://uk.ask.com/question/what-is-a-baby-bull-called> although fat chicks are called Heifers as slang, but that is because they have fatted calves....

Dairy cows i've never had an issue with, except the occasion licked window or mirror.

I did not know of the language differences. I apologize for bringing it up.

Thanks for explaining that though, I learned something today.
