

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Same creek + different stretch of water = completely different fish behavior

Re: Same creek + different stretch of water = completely different fish behavior

Author: : Six-Gun

Date: : 2013/9/16 0:52:02

URL:

There definitely is some pride in the fact that I caught ANYTHING on the first trip. It looks like someone stocks baitfish in the run it's so full of minnows and the water is just painfully slow. Funny sidenote: I actually caught one of those two larger fish on that first trip by doing nothing more than stripping line way, way out. The fly actually got around a bend and I thought to myself, "how am I going to know if I get a strike on a dry fly with the fly now out of sight?" Sure enough, a half second later I heard a loud SPLUNK - the unmistakable sound of a fish blasting through the water surface. Yeah, sound works as a strike indicator, too.