

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : Green Weenie

Re: Green Weenie

Author: : afishinado

Date: : 2013/9/16 9:36:33

URL:

Quote:

pcray1231 wrote:

Have you ever used an Adams? Wulff?

An Adams is tied the same way as any dark colored mayfly dun and the same for a (white) wulff for light colored duns.

A green weenie is pretty much just chartreuse chenille wrapped around the hook.

I understand what Andy is saying above. There are dozens of other flies I would tie on before a green weenie.

The difference between us that I have no problem if someone fishes GWs. There are nearly as many ways to approach and find pleasure in the sport of fly-fishing as there are fly anglers. The idea is to have fun.

Many anglers just beginning in the sport just want to catch some fish. No problem with that at all.

Some anglers that have fished for a long time specialize in certain things like fishing dries only, or Euro nymphing, or hatch matching, or traditional flies and equipment, or floating very long distances on a big river in a boat, head-hunting risers.....

All fun.