

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Fishing the Salmon River...

Fishing the Salmon River...

Author: : Big-Bass

Date: : 2013/9/16 14:37:16

URL:

Normally when I fish the Salmon River in the Fall I have used spinning gear because of the ease of use during the madness of the King run. But I would like to start fly fishing the river now that I am getting more into the sport. What would be a good rod/reel weight for me to get started with. I would also like to use the rod for steelhead, smallmouth bass here at home, and even some largemouth at some nearby farm pounds. Could it be possible to get a rod to cover bases from salmon to bass. I don't want to buy something expensive for fear of breaking, and for the fact that I only go up maybe once or twice a year. I am open to any suggestions you might have...I am not expert in this realm but would love to hear from some. Thanks!