

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : September's wild trout

Re: September's wild trout

Author: : troutbert

Date: : 2013/9/16 15:36:32

URL:

Quote:

pcray1231 wrote:

Yesterday, actually, I was on a small stream I know has lots of fish, and I was doing poorly in the morning. Figuring we had entered the cold season scenario, I went to the dry-dropper. That didn't work either. I think they were just "off". Shortly after lunch, things picked up, but they were nailing the dry, not the dropper. So I proceeded to ditch the dropper and ended up catching a few for the next hour or two before I had to quit.

It's now fall and it's getting pretty cool overnight. And warmer in the afternoon, so the fish are more active then.

Also, bugs, both aquatic and terrestrial, are more active in the afternoon.

So the fishing, particularly dry fly fishing, is MUCH better in the afternoon than in the morning.