I have landed Kings and Steel on that reel. I have beat the crap out of that set up due to not caring about it. It has yet to fail me and such I fish salmon\steel maybe 5 times a year. It is good enough. This is just my opinion and obviously not everybody else's.

My comment was more to the OP about saying he didn't want to buy anything expensive due to possibly breaking it and not using it too often. The Bean combo probably is a great rod and reel for the job he wants it to do. I've owned a good big of LLBean gear over the years and have enjoyed it. Their warranty is hard to beat as well. My advise would to go there and test cast it.
