inefishnet,

Your comment about clipped fins caught my eye. Someone correct me if I'm wrong, but I thought fin clippings were something PFBC did to monitor fish origin. I would think that a private hatchery wouldn't bother doing so. Is this assumption incorrect? Clipping fins is time consuming and could lead to lost fish die to infection. Accepting these two assumptions, one might think whoever stocked them bought them from PFBC? Would they sell fish to a private entity, especially one that has been accused of stocking over wild fish?

I'm not challenging you on this. I just want to know what's going on in the J and if clipped fish are being stocked, it might be worth investigating their origin.
