Very good stuff, fellas. That's an intriguing observation, Tups. I had the same suspicion about the last 3 digits on what appears to be a the model #, as it's reflects the actual rod length, but I had no clue what the first 3 could translate into. Luckily, I have both 5 and 6-weight lines to try, so where see which performs better.

EDIT: Sasquatch may be onto something, too. This may turn into a pure cast of cast-n-see based purely on the rod's performance with a given line weight as used by this highly inexperienced fly angler.
