That may be true of the upper river but the lower river is in worse shape than it was 5 years ago, like down around valley forge. We used to catch a pretty good number of smallies there but its been crap for the last few years.

I think the lack of smallies is probably more attributable to some silly anglers who continue to help an invasive species (flatheads) take as strong a hold as possible until there is nothing else left

Its also curious that right around the time the smallies seemed to really go away was when they discovered the radioactive isotope in the water
