I've never had any desire to pump the stomach on any fish. I just want to get it back in the water as quickly as possible, without any further stress.

I also kinda wonder how much good it does anyway.

Just because you find out what one certain fish is eating, doesn't necessarily mean that the other ones are eating the same thing.

Many times I've started fishing a spot, and caught 1 - or maybe 2 - fish on a certain fly. And after having thought I knew what they were eating - then having that fly get refused by all of the other fish.

It happens quite often
