klincy - I had intentions to fish a YWC headwaters watershed when I was up there a couple weeks ago...Went and scouted it, but didn't fish it. Flows may not have been excessively low for this time of year, but then again this time of year is generally the lowest average flows, especially on small freestoners...they just don't hold their water for more than 24-36 hours after a rain event. There wasn't enough water in it to make it enjoyable for fishing so we went and fished Pine instead. I made a mental note though, because with Spring time flows and 4 or 5x the water in it, it looked like it would be pretty good.
