You can definitely walk the stream from broad st. Although I would recommend starting at least at union blvd and work your way up( only like 2 or 3 blocks from broad st.) I wouldn't go downstream from broad though. Like H.A. said there is a nice path from there up to schoenersville rd. It is decent in that stretch. Was better until the cement plant cut all the cover down on the east side of the creek this past spring Above there is the Gertrude fox conservation area which also has a path along it (they call it the bridal path) and that is one of my favorite sections of the ATW. Above that is illicks mill and above the mill is the TT section. I prefer the TT water but there is plenty of fish in the ATW and if you don't have much time the TT section can be a lot of walking. I haven't been out there since about mid June so I can't say how it is right now but last fall I caught lots of small browns from union blvd all the way up from mid September thru October. This past spring it was fishing well also.
